Mindfulness and Judging, 2016 Federal Judicial Center 2017-04-27 This is a primer on mindfulness and its uses in judging. Mindfulness involves slowing down one's mental processes enough to allow one to notice as much as possible about a given moment or situation, and then to act thoughtfully based on what one has noticed. Much of the discussion of mindfulness in relation to judges so far has focused on health and wellness, but mindfulness also has obvious implications for the actual work that judges do. The purpose of mindfulness is not to tell one what to think or do but rather to help one think and act as one chooses with the benefit of deeper reflection and more fully conscious intent. For judges, whose judgments can have profound effects on others, it can be both an enormously effective tool and a key to a more satisfying professional life. The 21-Day Mindfulness Challenge 21 Day Challenges Are you tired of living on autopilot? Tired of letting your thoughts, feelings and reactions dominate you? Are you curious about how mindfulness can make a difference in your life? The present moment is a strange place. We are all trapped here, really, and there is utterly no other place to be, yet so few of us take a moment to stop and have a look around. The future and the past all exist in the mind. They are only ever memories, dreams, little flickers in the electrified meat we generously call our brains. The only thing that is real is the moment that is happening right now. To get to know the present, all you have to do is be aware. But try to become aware of the simple things around you - the sound of the birds in the trees, the smell of your coffee brewing - and you'll probably notice instantly that there is something preventing you from immersing yourself fully: your thought traffic. If you've ever tried to make a fancy dinner with a bored two year old in your presence, or tried not to think of a pink elephant (try it right now!) then you'll know the feeling. This is where mindfulness practice comes in. The 21-Day Mindfulness Challenge will help you to: Increase your awareness and live more in the present moment Get a deep understanding of what mindfulness really is and how it can improve your life Let go of excessive worrying, stress and the continuous stream of thoughts Find your own mindfulness style Develop an effortless daily mindfulness practice..and much more inside! Learn how to practice mindfulness and create more calm, joy and focus in your life TODAY! Are you ready to take the challenge?
